Online music stores have become one of the most prominent ways to market, redistribute and profit from music sales. Digital music downloading is the new wave of the technology world, and many have caught on to it. Starting an online music store can come as a bit of a challenge for the inexperienced, but this does not mean it is an impossible goal. It simply takes organization, innovation, patience and discipline to achieve starting and running a successful online music store. These steps will show you how these four essential characteristics play such an important part in your success. Obtain a music-redistribution license. The governmental copyright Web site offers specific licenses for music redistribution options of all kinds. The list that will be displayed will showcase several licensing options that can be used for redistribution sales. Legalize a business name and entity for your online music store. Each state requires a different registration process. Click on the Business Name Registration link below, and scroll through the list to locate your state's business registration link. When the site loads, there will be a list of prompts and directions that you will need to follow in order to establish and legalize your business name. Purchase a Web domain for your online music store. The Web domain is the name of your music store's Web site, and it is one of the most important aspects of your business. The name you choose should be catchy, yet simple enough for visitors and consumers to remember. Click on the Go Daddy link below. Type the domain name you desire in the blank data form that will appear to see if the domain name is available. Build your music store. This can be done one of two ways: You can either build your music store with a premade template that can be purchased when you obtain your Web domain name or click on the Wix link below to custom build your store yourself. GoDaddy comes equip with several Web site building tools that can meet any business budget. If you decide to build your own Web site, you will need to create a Wix account after you click on the Web site link. You can use a premade music or e-commerce template and alter it, or start from scratch. Tips Once your online music store is established, you will need to begin marketing immediately to build online traffic and generate revenue (see Resources for advise on marketing and generating traffic to your online music store.) PayPal is a highly recommended tool for accepting payment on your Web site. It's secure, fast and safe to protect you, as the seller, and the consumer (see Resources to set up a free, online merchant account.) Warnings It is always safer to sell your own music, but if you desire to redistribute other artists' music, beware of copyright redistribution laws. Never promote or sell music you do not own rights to or have no distribution license for. This can cause many unwanted legal issues that can result in a lawsuit against your company. If you have a passion for music and a website, you can earn extra money selling music online without any upfront costs. Commissions aren't huge -- usually less than a dime for the typical sale of a 99-cent song. However, how well you do is primarily up to you. Back in 1970, a teenager with a love for music created the old-economy equivalent of an online music store, selling vinyl records through the mail. That teenager, Richard Branson, eventually turned his Virgin Records start-up into a multi-billion dollar empire. To start an online music store you first need a website. Ideally, this should be a domain that you own so you can have complete control over the content and style. A domain name and web hosting fees can run about $100 per year. If you want to wait until you start earning some money before making this investment, you can use any blogging platform that gives you the ability to post ads for affiliate sales, or a shopping cart system for mail order items you might want to sell. Every year more than 1 billion tracks are purchased in digital format and downloaded over the Internet. The two largest online retailers, Apple and Amazon, account for about 85 percent of this market. Both offer affiliate programs open to just about anyone with a website who wants to start selling music online. Amazon and other retailers, such as CD Universe, give you the opportunity to make commissions on CDs and DVDs as well. Once you apply for and are approved as an affiliate, you are given a referral code to attach to links. Post these links on your website. Each time someone clicks on a link from your website and purchases from the retailer, you earn up to a 5-percent commission on the sale. It's relatively easy for anyone with a website to become an affiliate music seller and even easier for customers to bypass affiliates by going directly to iTunes or Amazon to download music. Creating a website that attracts customers is vital to online success. Instead of simply posting links to the most popular tracks, consider writing reviews of your favorite albums and searching out music that not everyone has listened to. You can also link to YouTube or Vimeo music videos, blog about entertainment news, or supplement your music sales with unique fan items such as T-shirts and posters. If you're a music lover who wants to take a hands-on approach to an online music store, you may prefer selling CDs, vinyl LPs or even musical instruments. To do this, set up an account with a service like PayPal.com, which lets you set up a shopping cart system and accepts credit cards without any upfront fees. Alternatively, you can create an account on online marketplaces like eBay or Shopify.com, which give you everything you need to create an online store on their websites. Shipping is something you will need to manage yourself, so research the cost of shipping the items you want to sell before setting a price. christian music online free streaming. listen to christian music online free. instrumental christian music online free listen. traditional christian music online free. christmas christian music online free. play christian christmas music online free. free online christian music- k love. free online christian music radio
