Many old paintings of Shivaji Maharaj (Shivaji Maharaj Original Pic) are found in museums all over the world, some of which are claimed to have been taken while Maharaj was alive. However, most of the paintings were taken after the death of Maharaj. This painting, probably taken in the 18th century, is in the museum of the Baroda Sansthan. Very few old photographs of Shivaji Maharaj are available. This photograph is housed in a museum in Moscow This picture is published in Robert Arm's book Historical Fragments of 1872. This was painted in 1750 by Nihal Chandra, a painter of Maharaj Sawant Singh of Kishangarh. It shows the king holding a sword in his right hand and a belt in his left hand. This painting is in the Bonhams Museum in London. The painting was published in 1762 in the Francois Valentine's Museum of Dutch Officials, bears the inscription "Den Heer Seva Gi". A photo is being shared on social media claiming it as the original picture of Chatrapati Shivaji Maharaj in the London museum. Let's verify the claim made in the post.The archived version of the post can be found here. Claim: Original picture of Chatrapati Shivaji Maharaj at the London museum.Fact: While it is true that there is a painting of Chatrapati Shivaji Maharaj in the London Museum, it is not the same as the one shown in the post. Hence the claim made in the post is FALSE.When we searched for this painting in 'The British Museum' website, we did not find the painting with this picture. It is true that there is a painting of Chatrapati Shivaji Maharaj in the London Museum. However, the picture of the painting inside the London Museum is not the one shown in the post. There is a Chatrapati Shivaji painting inside the 'Portrait of Indian Princes' album of 'The British Museum' website and it can be seen here.On reverse image search, a similar photo of the painting was found in an article published in the blog of 'Bharat Gyan'. In the description of the photo, it is mentioned as the only live sketch of Shivaji Maharaj discovered by historian V S Bendrey.But, in our research, we found out that this painting was not discovered by V S Bendrey. Vasudev Sitaram Bendrey is a well-known historian from Maharashtra who is famous for his research and findings of Sambhaji Maharaj, Tukaram Maharaj and Shivaji Maharaj. He is the person who found the real image of Shivaji Maharaj. In 1664 AD, Dutch Governor of Surat Von Valentyn had commissioned the paintings of Shivaji Maharaj and other princes. During his research in Europe, Vasudev Sitaram Bendrey found these paintings and published it for the first time in 1933. Until this picture was published, most people attributed a picture of Muslim Sardar to that of Shivaji. Photo published by Vasudev Sitaram Bendrey is still referred to as the original picture of Shivaji Maharaj in many sites.To sum it up, the picture in the post is not the painting inside the London Museum.
