Carcinoma definition pdf

My husband was diagnosed with hepatocellular carcinoma Jan 20/12. prognosis from 3 to 6 months. It was reported to an oncologist, first appointment Feb5. Sent for blood, CT, MRI. Return to Dr Forouzesah (Oncologo) March 5. Refused to Dr. Porter. He traced this number of Dr, called, only to find out it was not the right Dr to report to, so the file was sent to Dr Mulinair, point 21 of March. He said the operation was not an option, so he said he was referring to a radiologist, he talked about putting a catherder through his inguine and liver to give him a dose of Chemo. Expect until 2 April, try to find out who has actually been reported. Called there office to be told that there is only 2 in Nova Scotia and are very busy, but your husband is on their radar, file being watched and you should hear from me in a couple of days, with an appointment. My husband's got multiple tumors and one big, all in the liver. I came here to see if there was someone with hepatocellular carcinoma, if they had the treatment, and what was the result. Sarcomatoid carcinoma is a relatively rare form of cancer or malignant cells. As is the case with most tumors, first the tumors are detected, the better the chances of survival. The average age of those diagnosed with sarcomatoid lung carcinoma is 65. Sarcomatoid carcinoma is extremely raretumor which is a combination of cells of the epithelial tissue and malignant mesenchymal. It can be found in many positions around the body, including bladder, colon, uterus, ovary, breast and lung -- epithelial cells line many of our internal surfaces. If you notice abnormal growths or signs on your body and have a family history of cancer, it is better to talk to a doctor. People who smoke cigarettes, cigars or pipes are at an increased risk of sarcomatoid carcinoma due to harmful chemicals that inhale in the lungs. Approximately 90 percent of diagnosed people are heavy tobacco smokers. Extended exposure to asbestos or electrical insulation may also be risk factors of this form of cancer. Men should be particularly careful about risk factors for sarcomatoid carcinoma as they are four times more likely as women to diagnose with disease. Doctors recommend men to eat balanced diets with large amounts of antioxidants and omega-3 fatty acids and, of course, clear steer of smoking. As with many diseases and diseases, sarcomatoid carcinoma is not something that can be diagnosed with verbal confirmation of symptoms or naked eye. A biopsy is the only test that can confirm sarcomatoid carcinoma. If your doctor diagnoses you with this type of cancer, he or she may need to perform multiple tests, including a chest X-ray, TAC, PET scan, magnetic resonance, bone scan and a bone marrow biopsy. Sarcomatoid carcinoma cannot be diagnosed alone symptoms because the symptoms echo manyconditions. The cough and fatigue are two of the most common signs of this type of cancer, but may also indicate a cold or flu. However, a cough carrying blood is a common sign that should alert the individual to a more serious problem. Other symptoms of sarcomatoid carcinoma include fever due to recurring pneumonia, weight loss, worked breathing, chest pain and metastasis. The presence of more than one or two of these symptoms should prompt the doctor to order biopsy that can definitively diagnose sarcomatoid carcinoma. If you should look at an image of a sarcomatoid carcinoma, it seems a mixture of carcinoma -- cancer that begins in the skin or tissues that align or cover the internal organs in the body -- and sarcoma -- bone cancer, cartilage, fat, muscle, blood vessels, or other connective tissues or support. From the point of view of the treatment, the part of the carcinoma of this condition is easier to treat than the sarcoma part. Sarcomatoid carcinoma has a high recurrence rate, and tends to lead to a poor long-term prognosis. Each person is different, and no one can really predict how the disease will affect a single individual. Sarcomatoid carcinoma is a rare and aggressive form of cancer that no matter where it goes in the body. It can be unpredictable because it never affects two individuals, in the same way, making it difficult to determine a course of treatment. For this reason, prognosis is usually poor. The average agediagnosis of a pulmonary sarcomatoid carcinoma is 65. Compared to other lung cancers, the lung variety has the poorest prognosis, due to the limited success of chemotherapy. Again, it is difficult to say how this type of tumor will affect different people, as there is no single course of treatment. Sarcomatoid carcinoma is a rare and aggressive form of cancer without a tried course of treatment. He usually takes over about 65 years, and has a high recurrence rate. Some types of cancer don't respond well to chemotherapy. People with the disease need all the support they can get. Whether it's a shoulder to lean on, a meal at home, or an ear to listen to, a small support goes very far.
