Fun facts humans

Scientists speculated in the 1970s that strains share almost 99 percent of our genetic makeup. it was a good hypothesis -- research in the following decades showed them right. humans, after all, have a lot in common with other animal species. we feel the pain, and if you have ever seen a cat try to jump on a hot stove and quickly retire, you will have decided that even the felines do it. we have emotions, and as every dog owner can tell you, their dog friends show a joyful, affectionate and even depressed behavior. and if you look at a hemp - a believing species by many to share a common ancestor with humans -- you will see many traits and behaviors that seem much more human than animal. So, what makes this small difference of 1 percent between humans and chimps? genetically, DNA comparisons reveal some alterations - a slightly mutated gene here, a different protein there. These deviations show us why human jaws are smaller than those of strains, and why we are more or less susceptible to certain diseases. Although genes are remarkably similar, their expression is not. Think like this: sand and water can be combined to make both glass or only wet sand. but evolutionary progress explains religion, art, literature or moral decision-making? at a cognitive level, human beings are very different from most species. we have self-awareness, spiritual curiosity and philosophical muses. we possess the ability to mathematics, language, invention, mechanical adaptation and music. Chimps form communities, but there is a wide gulf between that community and human culture. and while chimps show self-awareness by recognizing itself in mirrors, there is still no evidence that this self-awareness leads them to reflect the greatest mysteries of the universe (which, in their case,be pushed by the question, "What does the chimps chimps do?") These collective differences seem to be the human soul, and what makes human beings. what defines exactly andthe soul is a philosophical question have weighed since ancient times. At the time of Socrates' death in the 5th century, the term "soul" was used in a very similar way today -- as not only what differentiates life from the dead, but as something responsible for our sense of justice, forecasting, introspection and our different emotional states. Interesting, some branches of philosophical thought around the fifth and sixth centuries have argued that even animals and plants had souls, and some philosophers - such as Empedocles, Anaxagoras and Democritus -- did not differ between animals and plants, because both were alive [source: Lorenz]. Regardless, our thoughts seem much more complex than those of other species. You could argue that this is because we are Chimp 2.0 - a better version of a basic model. The other argument is that we have become something completely different, perhaps due to an evolutionary mix-up or even a higher power. power. fun facts humans can't do. weird fun facts about humans. fun facts about dogs and humans. fun facts about human body. fun facts about animals and humans. fun facts about early humans. fun facts about humans in hindi. fun psychological facts about humans. creepy fun facts about humans. fun facts about sleep for humans. 100 fun facts about humans. fun facts about humans. gross fun facts about humans. fun facts about humans in space. fun facts about cats and humans
