Let's see which websites you can use to download the intro and title templates for Premiere Pro. In addition to an impressive library of intro templates, Motion Array offers presets, sound effects, royalty-free music, and stock footage. Furthermore, you can choose the software version to make sure that the templates you download can be used with the version of Adobe Premiere Pro you have installed on your computer. The website provides you with powerful search tools, so you can select the resolution of the template, up to 8K, or choose which types of templates are going to be displayed. Using the free subscription plan can limit your options since you'll only be able to download free templates, and your upload storage will be limited to just 1GB. The Pro subscription plan that can be purchased for $54 per month will grant you access to an almost endless selection of title templates as well as a huge selection of plugins for Adobe Premiere Pro. It is a designer pack that features ten pre-animated lower-thirds intro templates. It is free to use, but only a limited amount of assets can be downloaded for free. To download an item, you must purchase it, and prices can range from $16 to $50 for a single title template. Videohive is also a great source of title templates for Adobe After Effects, as it offers more than 5000 titles and intros that are compatible with this software. Furthermore, you can download presets for both Premiere Pro and After Effects that can be used to create stop-motion animations, perform color correction, or make the footage look like it was captured with a VHS camera. If you don't feel comfortable creating your titles or if you simply don't have the time to create your own titles, the Free Cinematic Style Library is not the best choice for you. On the other hand, Premiere Pro's users who don't often use title templates can benefit from downloading RocketStock's intro library.
